If you are not able to resolve your complaint with your provider

The New Zealand Qualifications Authority requires students who have a complaint to first follow the provider's complaints procedure (above). If the matter is not resolved satisfactorily, you may lodge a formal complaint in writing with the appropriate authority.

An independent alternative is The Quality Commission.

You can go to The Quality Commission if you have a complaint that has not been resolved by the provider's internal complaints process (above). However, you must notify the Quality Commission of your complaint within two months of the act or omission about which you want to complain.
